Annie Trevorah
Bio

Annie Trevorah is a London-based contemporary artist working across sculpture, installation, textiles, animation and immersive environments. Her practice examines transformation, evolution and the shifting relationships between human, animal and environment. Through hybrid forms and alternative evolutionary futures, Trevorah considers how bodies, identities and ecosystems might adapt within an increasingly interconnected world.

Drawing on contemporary science, environmental thought and emerging technologies, Trevorah creates immersive installations that propose new forms of interspecies kinship and challenge the perceived separation between humanity and the more-than-human world. Her works occupy a space between the organic and the engineered, the familiar and the uncanny, combining meticulous world-building with satire, playfulness and dark humour. Through absurd, seductive and often unexpected transformations, Trevorah examines questions of embodiment, agency and adaptation, while questioning contemporary attitudes towards enhancement, ecology and what it means to be human.

Trevorah completed her MA in Sculpture at the Royal College of Art in 2023 and is a member of the Royal Society of Sculptors. Recent solo exhibitions include Symbiosis (2023), Triffids at Chelsea Physic Garden (2023), Nature is a Cyborg at ALICE BLACK Gallery (2024), Plant Power (2024), Altered Tides (2025), Natural Orders of Hybrid Ecologies (2026). The Dwelling, presented by Mandy Zhang and curated by Josephine Bailey at Nobu Hotel London Portman Square.

Trevorah's work has been exhibited internationally, including as a finalist for the Arte Laguna Prize in Venice, and at Centro Culturale di Milano, Las Laguna Gallery, California, and the Chianciano Biennale, where she received the Prize for Photography and Digital Art. Her public commissions and exhibitions include Holland Park, Fulham Palace, Battersea Park and West Dean, with support from Arts Council England.
